BMW permanent erection claim tossed out

A man who claimed riding a BMW K1100RS gave him a permanent erection has had his claim dismissed in court.

Henry Wolf, from California, alleged four hours on the BMW in 2010 left him with an erection for two years.

He sought compensation for lost wages, medical expenses, emotional distress and 'general damages' from BMW and seat-maker Corbin-Pacific.

But the claim has been tossed out by the Superior Court of San Francisco, where judge James J McBride ruled the plaintiff did not present enough supporting evidence.

The court accepted testimony of a urologist, Dr Jack McAninch, that the plaintiff suffered from priapism, a condition involving a persistent erection.

But it rejected testimony of a neurologist, Dr Jonathan Rutchik, that it was possible for vibrations from a motorcycle to cause priapism.

The defendants' evidence included testimony from the bike's former and subsequent owners, as well as Corbin-Pacific chief exec Mike Corbin.

Parksville members hampered in planned trip across America and Canada

Barb and Hal Vousden are new Parksville members of BMW Riders Vancouver and struck off April 22 on a road trip.

The plan was to ride the down the west coast of the US, across Texas and then the Gulf Coast to Key West, then north through the Appalachians, into the Canadian Maritimes, the Cabot Trail and Newfoundland and finally back across Canada.

However less than a week into the trip while in Phoenix, a problem back home forced them to come back. They came back home to fix the issue, but hope to continue a modified version of the trip this month.

They did send along a few photos of their preempted journey however.

Leaving Parksville

Typical Oregon Coast

Hazards of the road... a hit from a lug nut thrown by a passing vehicle.

Looking back at the Golden Gate Bridge, the bike looks pretty small down in the parking lot.

Third day of nothing but desert makes this sign a little hard to believe!

Highlights of a shortened trip

Another road hazard? Watch out for them cactus spikes, they seek moisture!

Twin Falls Idaho, the site of Evel Knievel's attempt to jump the Snake River Canyon in the 70s That little bump mid photo near the top is all that remains of his ramp. We also watched base jumpers leaping of the bridge here. One of 'em said what we were doing was more dangerous than what they were doing.

Perfect end to a shortened trip... hail near Pt. Angeles. Fortunately we were in eating lunch when this came by.

We need people to help organize club rides

The warm weather is here and we are well into the riding season. So why not step up and volunteer to organize one of the rides from our ride calendar. Organizing a ride is fairly easy: make a reservation at the restaurant, decide on a ride route to get us there, and establish a start time. Show us your favourite back roads as we wind our way to the destination.

On the day of the ride, bring about six copies of a route map and/or tank bag directions to the departure point, divide the group into packets, and send them on their way.

If you want to volunteer, pick a ride from the calendar and let me know. If you have questions give me a call at 250-656-6694 or drop me an email bleitch@telus.net.
